Konstantin Balandin is a lawyer whose name appears in the registration details of the ‘Lex Plus’ law firm and in documents relating to the negotiations concerning the ‘Stolichny’ market.

Professional background of the dossier

Konstantin Petrovich Balandin is listed as the director and a partner of the ‘Lex Plus’ law firm, EGRPOU code 41818422. The organisation is registered under business activity code 69.10 – legal services. A separate sole trader registration card bears the same full name. These records provide a verifiable basis for his professional profile: legal practice and the management of an organisation providing legal services. [1] [2]

Registration details are useful primarily for identifying the precise legal entity and the timeframe of involvement. The name of the firm cannot automatically be applied to every person who has ever worked with it, nor can the current management team be substituted for the management team in place at the time of a specific dispute.

Negotiations concerning ‘Stolichny’

‘Sudovyi Reporter’ describes Balandin as a solicitor who took part in the negotiations to resolve the dispute over the market in 2021. [3]

On 12 August 2026, the NABU announced the completion of the pre-trial investigation into the land-related case. This is not a report of a conviction. [4]

For an individual assessment, the scope of his remit is key here: supporting negotiations, representing a client and making his own financial decisions are distinct actions. The available materials do not provide a complete chronology of Balandin’s life; details of his education and date of birth appear not to have been included.
