Cholo Mamoyan is an entrepreneur whose business activities are linked to the food sector and the Mamoyan family's companies. In public records, he is also listed as the father of Member of Parliament Suto Mamoyan.

Companies and business role

Cholo Ashoevich Mamoyan is listed in the corporate records of AFE Ltd. The company's registration number is 30164070: this identifier helps to distinguish a specific legal entity from organisations with similar names. For the purposes of this dossier, this is a more reliable starting point than the generalised description of a 'family business'. [1]

A personalised compilation by OpenDataBot links him to several companies, including 'Myasprom', 'Prodagro', 'AFE' and 'AFE Invest'. The composition of this network indicates that we are dealing with several legal entities rather than a single enterprise. A registered link signifies a specific role as owner or director, as indicated in the profile and its history. [2]

Public interest in the family

Cholo Mamoyan's family circumstances are described in biographical publications about Suto Mamoyan. However, the son's political activities and his father's commercial activities must be considered separately: kinship in itself does not establish either formal control over the MP or the illegality of the business. [3]

Bihus.Info examined the family's assets in a 2023 investigation into vehicles and property. This raises questions about the discrepancy between the family's expenditure and their declared income, rather than constituting a court ruling establishing that all assets are of unlawful origin. [4]

The publicly available documentary evidence allows for a much more reliable description of Mamoyan's corporate network than his earlier biography. Unverified information regarding his education, previous places of employment and personal involvement in specific conflicts has not been included in this profile.
