Internal investigation and departure from office

In autumn 2023, following the publication of a journalistic investigation, Dmytro Tyshlek was temporarily suspended from his duties as deputy head of the National Police. According to a statement by the Ministry of Internal Affairs published on 15 December, he returned to work following an internal investigation. A few days later, Tyshlek submitted his resignation of his own accord; on 19 December, the Ministry of Internal Affairs confirmed that an order had been signed dismissing him from his post. The gifts case: the outcome of the first-instance proceedings

The NACP links Tyshlek's full name to administrative case No. 757/15569/24-p under Article 172-5 of the Code of Administrative Offences. On 2 May 2024, the Pecherskyi District Court of Kyiv dismissed the case on the grounds that the elements of an administrative offence were not present. The court ruling relates to a specific report concerning gifts; it does not pertain to the allegations regarding payments from 'Khimprom'. [4] [5]

In September 2024, the National Police informed 'Ukrainska Pravda' that Colonel Tyshlek had been sent for training at the National Academy of Internal Affairs. This was a separate stage following his departure from the post of deputy head. [6]
