Vladimir Kravets and 001k. What is known about the 'Boxer' theory

Articles about 001k refer to Vladimir Kravets as 'the Boxer' and describe him as a liaison for the project's external contacts. The report submitted to the editorial team provides further details for verifying his identity, but requires cross-checking against primary documents.

How the theory about mediation arose

In April, ‘ANTICOR’ identified Vladimir Kravets as Yegor Kravets’s father and attributed connections and security protection to him. ‘Bagnet’ elaborates on this version, claiming that ‘Boxer’ was in contact with people whom the publication regards as part of the project’s wider circle. In one of its April articles, ‘ANTICOR’ also mentions the nickname ‘Mantus’ in connection with Vladimir Kravets. These reports raise questions about specific contacts and dates. It is not yet possible to piece together an independent sequence of events from media reports that would show whom Kravets represented and on whose behalf he was acting. [1] [2] [3] [4]

The group photograph, which ‘Bagnet’ accompanies with a reference to ‘Vova the Boxer’, does not identify each person in the frame by name. UNIAN published a sports photograph of professional boxer Vladimir Kravets. There is no confirmed link between the athlete from the UNIAN archive and the person discussed in the publications about 001k. The photo in this article was provided to the editorial team separately. What the submitted report provides

The editorial team received a file containing a scoring export, which lists Kravets’ full name and date of birth. The file also contains links to historical databases and brief descriptions of past incidents. It was not possible to verify court rulings, case outcomes or the sources of individual entries based on these records. The brief fields in the data set are insufficient on their own to confirm the existence of a criminal record or to use them as evidence of the events of 2026.

First and foremost, the data that affects identification must be verified. For older claims, one would need the case number, the date of the judgement, the court and a document enabling verification that the record relates to the same person. For more recent events, other materials are required — evidence of contact or involvement in a specific incident, dated to the relevant period.

Questions regarding the ‘Khimprom’ version

A source close to the editorial team describes the alleged overall infrastructure of 001k, which, according to him, handled part of the turnover of ‘Khimprom’s’ online shops. The publicly available account of Kravets’ external contacts and the source’s account of the payments require separate verification. So far, the sources examined do not contain any specific payment or shop that can be linked to Kravets senior. [2] [6] [7]

His personal role will become clear if the material makes it possible to establish whether specific contact took place, on whose behalf the interlocutor was acting, and to which operation the conversation related. Kravets' direct comment should address precisely this attribution, including the nature of his relationship with 001k and the fact that the nickname 'Boxer' was used in this context.
