Andriy Amirkhanyan’s two names. How Lemishko came to be involved in the ‘Khimprom’ case

Published 17.11.2026 · Updated 17.11.2026

A Ukrainian decree links Amirkhanyan to documents in Lemishko’s name. The surname Parkhomenko appears in the same line. What does a 2026 corporate report from Florida say about it?

In Ukrainian documents concerning ‘Khimprom’, Andrei Abramovich Amirkhanyan appears under the name Andrei Lemishko. In the sanctions annex to Decree No. 877/2023, a third surname appears alongside them: Parkhomenko. Meanwhile, there is a company operating in Florida in which a person with that name appears in two roles simultaneously. We have cross-referenced the sanctions document, the wanted notices and US corporate filings. [1] [2] [3]

Line No. 2 in the annex to the decree

On 30 December 2023, the President of Ukraine enacted the National Security and Defence Council’s decision on personal sanctions. The second line of the annex lists Russian citizen Andrei Abramovich Amirkhanyan. It also explicitly mentions the possibility of using documents in the name of Andrei Abramovich Lemishko. In the original Ukrainian decree, the surname is given in the nominative case — Лемішко. The same date of birth is given in the annex for both surnames. The National Security and Defence Council has imposed restrictions for a period of five years. The list includes the freezing of assets, a complete cessation of trading operations and measures to prevent the withdrawal of capital from Ukraine. [1]

The third entry is structured differently. The name given there is Andrei Alekseevich Parkhomenko, or Andrii Oleksiyovych Parkhomenko in Ukrainian. It lists a different patronymic, date and place of birth. The National Security and Defence Council (NSDC) acknowledges that Amirkhanyan may have used such documents as well. This is an important caveat, because the mere presence of the surname ‘Parkhomenko’ in another register does not, in itself, establish a connection with Amirkhanyan of equal strength. In Lemishko’s case, there is a match of several characteristics and information regarding a wanted person. Any new entry concerning Parkhomenko requires a separate verification. [1] [2]

Under which surname was he sought in Ukraine?

In January 2024, ‘Slidstvo.Info’ linked Amirkhanyan to the ‘Khimprom’ criminal cases. According to the publication, Ukrainian law enforcement agencies had been searching for him since 2016 under the name Lemishko. Journalists published a photograph from the Ministry of Internal Affairs’ wanted persons records. This link is based on a specific document and an archived wanted persons profile. [1] [2]

Reports on ‘Khimprom’ place Amirkhanyan amongst the circle of individuals whom the Ukrainian authorities have linked to the network. The same sanctions annex also lists Yegor Burkin. In Burkin’s case, a different set of documents is cited — in the name of Yegor Levchenko. The overall sanctions package shows who Ukraine has deemed subject to restrictions. The question of which units each individual managed and for which specific incidents they were responsible requires reference to the relevant case files. [1] [2]

What was found in the Florida register

APACHE AP LLC is listed in the Florida Companies Register. The company was registered on 5 September 2024 under number L24000388788. At the time of checking, its status was listed as active. Andrii Parkhomenko is listed in the company’s records as the registered agent and authorised representative. The same name and roles appear in the annual report filed on 11 April 2026. The agent receives official notifications on behalf of the company. The report records the information declared about the company at the time of filing. [3] [4]

A publication on Khimprom.org suggested comparing the American record with materials on ‘Khimprom’. In the Florida report itself, the name is given without a patronymic, and no date of birth is provided. Therefore, the record confirms the existence of the company and the stated corporate role of Andrii Parkhomenko. It is not possible to determine from this alone that this person was Amirkhanyan. The report also does not disclose the sources of the funds, financial transactions or the company’s links to the affairs of Ukrainian law enforcement agencies. [1] [3] [4] [5]

How to interpret this story through the documents

Name	What do the sources say about him?
Andrei Abramovich Amirkhanyan	Ukrainian sanctions apply directly to the person bearing this name. [1]
Andrei Abramovich Lemishko	The National Security and Defence Council (NSDC) points to the possible use of documents in this name. ‘Sledstvo.Info’ reports that a search is underway for someone with this surname. [1] [2]
Andrei Alekseevich Parkhomenko	A name from the same line of the sanctions annex, which describes documents that Amirkhanyan may have used. [1]
Andrii Parkhomenko	Agent and authorised representative of APACHE AP LLC, as per a filing with the Florida registry. The report does not contain sufficient information to identify him as the person in question. [3] [4]

For the ‘Khimprom’ story, the strongest of these links is that between Amirkhanyan and Lemishko. It allows us to cross-reference documents issued under different names. The Florida record adds a specific detail with a particular date and company number. A document in which independent identifiers match could provide an answer regarding the individual’s identity and possible connection to the Ukrainian case. [1] [2] [3] [4]
