The investigation’s version of events

The Ulytau Regional Police Department linked both suspects to a scheme involving the sale of drugs via Telegram within Kazakhstan. The investigation also examined the alleged laundering of proceeds from these sales. The police statement did not specify who ran the shop, how responsibilities were divided, or exactly which transactions Kramskoy was accused of. [1]

The police’s response cites paragraphs 1, 2, 3 and 5 of Part 3 of Article 297 of the Criminal Code of Kazakhstan as the legal basis for the investigation. The response does not contain any information regarding the weight of the consignments or the exact route taken by the substances across the border. [1] [3]

According to information from the editorial team

This editorial team has information suggesting that Ruslan Kramskoy worked at ‘Khimprom’ under the supervision of Karina Sergeyevna Koynash. In its published response, the Ulytau regional police did not name Koynash nor did they link Kramskoy to ‘Khimprom’. There is no independent confirmation of this version of events.
