Tetyana Anatoliivna Hlynyana is a businesswoman implicated in an investigation into food supplies for the Ukrainian Armed Forces. Unlike many others involved in public scandals, her connection to the criminal proceedings has been confirmed by a NABU identification card bearing her name, photograph and date of birth. A wanted notice was published on 14 April 2025 in connection with case No. 52023000000000024. [1]

Army catering: two different figures in a single investigation

According to NABU, a scheme was in place to inflate the prices of certain high-demand items within the general food catalogue during procurement for the Ministry of Defence. The investigating body estimated the illegal misappropriation of funds for August–December 2022 at over 733 million hryvnias. A further 788 million hryvnias relate to an alleged attempt that was not carried through to completion. It is incorrect to add these two figures together and present the result as money that has already been embezzled. [2]

Glinyana's wanted notice lists charges relating to aiding and abetting the misappropriation of property on an exceptionally large scale, attempted offences and money laundering. This information comes from the prosecution. It establishes the grounds for prosecution but does not replace a court's finding of guilt regarding a specific individual. [1]

On 12 November 2026, the monitoring project of the High Anti-Corruption Court reported that the case involving 733 million hryvnias had been referred to court. Consequently, the case can no longer be described solely as an early operational investigation. At the same time, the referral of the indictment does not constitute a conviction. Procedural stages and the legal status of individuals should be assessed on a case-by-case basis. [3][4]

New development: €1.1 million for the persecution of a former employee

On 17 November 2026, NABU reported that it had uncovered another alleged scheme: in return for a fee, a proposal was made to organise the criminal prosecution of an individual and the search for €2 million in undeclared funds. According to the bureau, the agreement provided for €100,000 for certain procedural actions and a further €1 million upon achieving the next milestone. The agency reported that four individuals were under suspicion. [5]

In the official publication, the client is named as a former supplier of foodstuffs to the Ministry of Defence, without her surname being specified. LB.ua established the link between this incident and Glinyana specifically, citing ‘Automaidan’. Therefore, the personal identification in this section relates to the organisation’s and the media’s reports; it would be inaccurate to attribute it directly to the NABU text. [6]

Croatian hotels: assets and changes of ownership

A separate series of reports concerns the hotel business in Croatia. The reports mention Zen Adria, Pigment and Mimoza; the relevant legal entities are listed in the Croatian FINA system. Journalists have also reported on the companies’ transition to the Luxembourg-based Staywell Group structure. This means that Hlynyanaya’s previous links to the assets cannot be directly transferred to her current direct ownership without specifying a date. [7][8][9][10]

Significant overseas assets and government contracts within a single business narrative provide grounds for an investigation into the origin of the funds. However, the documents gathered do not contain a definitive court ruling establishing that specific hotels were paid for using embezzled funds intended for army catering. Tracing the money trail requires bank transfers, purchase contracts and evidence of ownership on the relevant dates.

What determines the seriousness of this case

This report is based on a named NABU wanted notice, a major case referred to court, and a separate new investigation offering a reward of one million. This carries considerably more weight than anonymous allegations. At the same time, each case retains its own narrative: the alleged food fraud, possible pressure on a former employee and the story of the hotel companies do not constitute a single proven offence simply because of a coincidence in surnames.
